At the present time, Section 102-D, Paragraph 1, Volume 4, Page 23, Manual of Instructions sets forth a brief description of the Central Intelligence Agency's (CIA) jurisdiction and activities in the United States. It is believed that this particular section should be revised to present a broader description of CIA's responsibilities and to more specifically pinpoint the authorized limits of CIA's activities in this country. The suggested revision does not constitute a policy change. The proposed revision will not necessitate any change in the FBI Handbook.

ACTION:

Enclosed, for your approval, is a proposed revision of Section 102-D, Paragraph 1, Volume 4, Page 23, Manual of Instructions.

By memorandum dated July 31, 1958, I reported that according to CIA officials, Dulles had not been treated roughly by Congressional committees who questioned him concerning CIA's coverage of the Middle East situation.

On August 6, 1958, Dulles told Agent Papich that the committees asked him many pointed questions but he was treated courteously. He then commented that he was more concerned about the false charges of one man than he was with the questions thrown at him by Congress. He made reference to [redacted] the operator of a private intelligence service, who has been highly critical of CIA. [redacted] recently disseminated issues of a periodical to various individuals and particularly to members of Congress.

[redacted] is a former Office of Strategic Services (OSS) officer who has been operating a small, so-called intelligence service. He claims to be an expert on numerous matters and has openly stated that he possessed certain highly important information which had been ignored by the Government. [redacted] has the reputation of being unreliable.

In the August 25, 1958, issue of "Newsweek" under the section "The Periscope," a statement was made that the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) had circulated among the armed services a list of subjects which "Soviet spies have been told to concentrate on." The Liaison Agent has been endeavoring to establish if CIA, in fact, prepared and circulated such a list. The matter was referred to CIA on September 3, 1958.

On September 11, 1958, [redacted] CIA, advised that she had checked with all appropriate divisions within her Agency and there is no evidence whatsoever indicating that CIA circulated a list as described.

On September 19, 1958, a confidential source connected with the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), who has contacts in Congress, furnished Agent Papich the following information:

An unidentified member of Congress advised the source that certain top officials in the Government have become greatly concerned over the competency of CIA. The source was told that Attorney General Rogers is one of the officials who is endeavoring to promote some corrective action. In this regard, he allegedly called on the Director for his suggestions and recommendations. The Congressional representative told the source that Mr. Hoover was actively assisting Mr. Rogers in this matter.

The source in CIA commented that he personally realized that there could be nothing to the foregoing story and he would not be surprised if his "friend" in Congress was passing out some wild gossip or was merely planting a story in order to determine how it would be handled by the CIA employee.

The CIA source emphasized that he considered this information extremely sensitive and he asked the Liaison Agent to give him complete protection as a source.

For your information, the Liaison Agent has been informed that actual construction of the Central Intelligence Agency's (CIA's) new building has not been initiated. So far the only work done has been that in connection with the clearing of land and surveying. W. C. Sullivan

On September 26, 1958, [redacted] CIA, advised that within the next two months some work will be initiated on the foundation of the building. Logan

Several weeks ago, CIA advised us that the Agency might submit name check requests and possibly fingerprint check requests on all employees to be used on the construction job. [redacted] stated that very likely such requests will not be submitted until after the first of the year. He stated that he would keep the Liaison Agent informed of developments. b3

There is attached Resolution #552 passed by Legionnaires in the Department of Maryland, The American Legion, relative to establishing a joint Congressional "Watch Dog" Committee to supervise the activities of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA). This resolution is very critical of CIA. It specifically points out that the FBI and the Atomic Energy Commission are subject to continuing Congressional scrutiny. The resolution further points out that a republic, such as ours, with divided powers and checks and balances cannot safely or for long permit an executive agency to operate completely without Congressional oversight and control!

There is also attached Senate Bill #101 of the 85th Congress which calls for the same legislation as is called for in the attached resolution. It is rather apparent that some of the Maryland Legionnaires have been contacted by members of Congress relative to this matter.

DeLoach will, of course, make no comment concerning the attached resolution and will not vote one way or the other in this matter.

Reference is made to the enclosed memorandum to the Director from CIA requesting that a lecture be given by W. C. Sullivan on the subject of communism on any one of three dates in December. Reference is also made to the comments of the Director on the enclosed routing slip wherein he points out certain glaring contradictions in the thinking of CIA.

It is bellevied to be in the best interest of the Bureau to give this lecture, not because of the information which can be conveyed to CIA on communism in the United States, but because it will give Sullivan an opportunity to raise a number of questions himself of the group concerning CIA's own activities in the field of communism. In other words, it can be a bit of a challenge to see how much the FBI can learn about the operations of CIA during the course of this lecture and discussion rather than the converse.

Of the three dates suggested, December 11, 1958, would be the most suitable for Sullivan in view of his numerous prior commitments. 30

It is to be noted that CIA said that the final date and details could be arranged through liaison. In view of this fact, Liaison Supervisor S. J. Papich can handle the arrangements.

For record purposes, while discussing another matter with Dave Lawrence of "U. S. News and World Report," 10-24-58, Mr. Lawrence observed that several years ago his publication had run an item on Harold Keith Thompson indicating that Thompson had been a candidate of the National Renaissance Party and in view of Thompson's denial of ever being a candidate, "U. S. News and World Report" had to run a retraction. Thompson is mentioned in the House Committee on Un-American Activities report on Neo-Fascist groups dated 9-17-54. Lawrence stated that Thompson apparently had some connection with the German language paper, "Der Weg", in Buenos Aires and that he, Lawrence, mentioned to Alan Dulles of CIA that there were plenty of Fascist and anti-Nazi elements in South America, apparently with money at their disposal, suggesting that CIA might well keep abreast of any situation in that area from this group. He particularly had in mind the German publication "Der Weg" and in this connection he turned over to Alan Dulles the "U. S. News and World Report" file on Harold Keith Thompson in view of the anti-Semitic background of "Der Weg." Lawrence made the observation that CIA apparently was doing nothing in South America in keeping track of anti-Jewish proponents in that area who might have some possible connection with the people in this country and that since "Der Weg" had been run out of the Argentine because of its pro-fascist policy it was his feeling that CIA should attempt to find out if "Der Weg" is reorganizing in Germany.

The Department, by memorandum 11-21-56, noted that Thompson was a correspondent for the Argentine newspaper and as such was not required to register under the Registration Act. However, since Thompson was soliciting declarations of greeting addressed to Admiral Doenitz, a German war criminal then being released from custody, the Department noted that if subject was engaged in political activities, registration under the act might be required in spite of his working for a foreign newspaper. Under date of June 20, 1958, the Department by memorandum advised the Bureau that since the exemption provided representatives of newspapers under Section 3(d) of the Foreign Agents Registration Act as amended, is available to the subject, his registration as an agent of a foreign principal will not be solicited at this time.

RE: HAROLD KEITH THOMPSON, WAS.

The Bureau advised the Assistant Attorney General of the Internal Security Division on July 1, 1958, by memorandum that the report of SA Edward A. Brandt dated May 27, 1958, at New York, which was forwarded to the Internal Security Division on June 11, 1958, reflected that there was no indication of any connection at the present time between the subject and "Der Weg," and that the decision of the Department as reflected in its June 20, 1958, memorandum may have been reached prior to the receipt of their consideration of the referenced report from New York. The Bureau requested, therefore, advice as to whether the contents of the referenced report changed the decision of the Department as reflected in its memorandum of June 20, 1958.

To date, no reply has been received from the Department. A follow-up was sent to the Department September 18, 1958, requesting a reply to the Bureau's memorandum of July 1, 1958.

On 10-21-58 [redacted] who is with [redacted]

[redacted] of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) called the Leave Office and spoke with SA R. G. Hunsinger. [redacted] stated that CIA does not have a policy with respect to maternity leave, that they are contemplating the formulation of such policy and that [redacted] had asked him to call some agencies to get an idea as to what this policy is as practiced in other agencies. He wanted to know our policy.

[redacted] was advised that we do have a specific maternity leave policy which is that set forth in the Federal Personnel Manual under section showing a suggested guide for granting maternity leave. It was pointed out that the guide set out in this manual is neither regulatory nor mandatory nor instructions of the Commission, but that we follow it. He was also told we have two local ground rules not indicated in the guide which are that employees granted maternity leave must have had at least one year's Bureau service and also that the total time employees may be away on maternity leave is six months. The suggested guide set forth in the Federal Personnel Manual is enclosed.

[redacted] was appreciative of this information.

You previously have been informed that [redacted]
[redacted] CIA, had suffered a nervous breakdown
[redacted]

On October 27, 1958, [redacted] CIA, advised Agent Papich on a strictly confidential basis that [redacted] condition is gradually improving but it is most doubtful that he will ever return to CIA. According to [redacted] it is the consensus of opinion among CIA officials that [redacted] undoubtedly will recover but Allen Dulles would not take the risk of giving [redacted] such heavy responsibilities. [redacted] very likely will return to private business and possibly his law practice.

[redacted] then confidentially stated that a "power struggle" is developing within CIA in anticipation that [redacted] eventually will be replaced. At the present time [redacted] office is being run by [redacted]

[redacted] has much support within CIA and is highly regarded. The Bureau has little occasion to deal with him directly but in general he has been friendly and cooperative. Over the years we actually never have had any conflicts with [redacted] It is the belief of the Liaison Agent that [redacted] has avoided conflicts, not because of any deep friendship toward the Bureau, but because of his respect for our prestige and competency. [redacted] backers include many old Office of Strategic Services (OSS) officials who will make every effort to entrench [redacted] as [redacted] successor. A conflict is already arising in that [redacted]

[redacted] also wants the job. [redacted] as you know, has been a polio cripple for several years but, nevertheless, has actively discharged his duties as [redacted] which has included several trips in foreign countries. He is highly regarded by Allen Dulles and has many supporters in CIA. Over the years [redacted] has made many contacts in Government circles, including Congress. [redacted] is believed to be particularly weak in this field. Before [redacted]

[redacted] always has wanted to return to this particular field and he now sees a good opportunity to make such a move.

For your information, [redacted]
CIA is one of the top jobs in the Agency. [redacted]

By memorandum dated October 28, 1958, I furnished information concerning the "power struggle" developing within CIA as a result of the maneuvering taking place to come up with a replacement for [redacted] I pointed out that [redacted] and [redacted] were two CIA officials who very likely would be considered for the job. You may be interested in the following information developed by the Liaison Agent which touches upon CIA organization and personnel.

A few weeks ago, General Cabell received his fourth star as a general. The Liaison Agent has been reliably informed 2-1 that Allen Dulles pushed this move very strongly in order to bring more prestige to "the intelligence community." Dulles allegedly told the President that it would add to the prestige of U. S. intelligence if CIA had a very high ranking military official. Dulles reportedly suggested that if Cabell were raised to a higher rank, intelligence interests would be best served. yu

Now that Cabell has acquired a fourth star, Dulles allegedly is ready to make his next move. He hopes to have a National Security Council (NSC) directive issued which will strengthen the responsibilities of the office of Director, CIA, bringing him closer to Cabinet rank. It is not known exactly how Dulles wants his responsibilities described but his motive is to bring more prestige and strength to the office which he now holds. te

While discussing other official business with Agent Papich on November 5, 1958, Allen Dulles brought up the following matters:

1. Dulles made reference to the recent "Nation" article which attacked the Bureau. He stated that many years ago he made up his mind that he would not read the magazine because he did not approve of the political line and had little use for most of the contributors. He stated that he had heard about the article attacking the Bureau, but had seen no reason to read it until recently when one of his subordinates suggested that it might be worthwhile to do so. Dulles stated that he read the article and that he was shocked at the extremes to which the writer had gone in striking at the Bureau. He referred to the material as "trash" and stated that he wanted the Liaison Agent to pass a message to the Director to the effect that if CIA's assistance was needed in running down any leads concerning any organization or individual involved in a plan to attack the Bureau, he would be most willing to give full cooperation.

2. Dulles made brief reference to Cyrus Eaton. He stated that several years ago he had personal dealings with Eaton when he was practicing law. He described Eaton as having been "very sharp," but he is of the firm opinion that Eaton is now "batty."

3. Dulles stated that he had been invited by Gordon Gray to sit in on a Cabinet meeting scheduled for November 6, 1958, at which the Director was to speak. Dulles stated he was looking forward with great interest to hearing the Director.

This study of intelligence operations in the United States today criticizes the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) for being too secretive, for possibly exceeding its purpose, and for lack of coverage behind the Iron Curtain. It also accuses the FBI of excluding the Office of Strategic Services (OSS) from South America during World War II, of seeking to expand its foreign intelligence after the war, and of influencing President Truman to disband OSS in 1945. The book is done in a scholarly tone, but fails to present a truly penetrating view of American intelligence.

Captioned book, (1) which was published by the Harvard University Press, has been reviewed by Central Research. It is a dry, scholarly treatise on what should be a topic of vital, pulsing interest to every American today: intelligence in the age of nuclear warfare. It has, however, neither the intense, cliff-hanging thrills of an Eric Ambler novel, nor the piercing, analytical clarity of Sherman Kent's Strategic Intelligence for American World Policy. (2) It is, instead, a reference book of the various departments and agencies currently dealing in intelligence work, and contains a capsuled history of the events that have led the United States from the bumbling use of Pinkerton agents during the Civil War to the interlocking network of nearly two dozen organizations now engaged in gathering information.

Drops Innuendoes

Despite the title of Ransom's book, it is not confined entirely to CIA, but rather is a study of the "growth and function of central intelligence (as a whole) since World War II." (3) It is the outgrowth of a series of lectures given by the author at the Harvard University Graduate School of Public Administration, and details the rise of Army intelligence from a $200,000 operation in the 1920's to a $125,000,000 project in 1958;(4) takes sly digs at the FBI and intelligence in general ("the spy business is booming");(5) and puts in a plug for the "eggheads" in espionage work over the "cloak-and-dagger" boys.

Glamor is Gone

According to Ransom, 30 per cent of today's intelligence data comes from military attaches and routine military operations, 25 per cent from tourists and public source materials, 25 per cent from the reports of United States' agencies abroad, and only 20 per cent from clandestine operations.(6) He quotes former OSS Director William J. Donovan as saying, "good intelligence (is) no more mysterious than McGuffey's Second Reader, and just about as sinister."(7)

Counter-intelligence Functions

As for the FBI, Ransom cites primarily its Special Intelligence Service (SIS) activities during World War II (based on original material from Don Whitehead's The FBI Story), and describes it now as being "largely...an agency for domestic counter-intelligence."(8) He does not, however, give the Bureau any credit when discussing such counter-intelligence operations as the apprehensions of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, Morton Sobell, and Colonel Rudolph Abel.(9)

FBI vs. OSS

Ransom maintains that during the war OSS was excluded from operations in South America, "a jealously guarded jurisdiction of the Federal Bureau of Investigation's Special Intelligence Service,"(10) and charges that the Bureau was apparently influential in persuading President Truman to disband OSS in 1945.(11) After the war, Ransom alleges, the Bureau sought to expand its SIS to a "world-wide basis," and only withdrew, "with some reluctance,"(12) when the plan was shelved and CIA took over in its place. Later on in the book, he quotes a 1949 Hoover Commission report that "unsatisfactory relationships existed between CIA and...the Federal Bureau of Investigation."(13)

Criticizes CIA

At no time does Ransom question the necessity and desirability of an intelligence apparatus--"Nothing is more crucial in the making of national decisions"(14)---but he does reserve a few, special brickbats for CIA itself. He calls it a "mysterious, super-secret shadow agency, "(15) questions its "place in the democratic process, "(16) and needles it for lack of coverage behind the Iron Curtain. (17) He also suggests that, when it moves into its new, sumptuous quarters in Virginia, it should keep in mind Professor Parkinson's law that "Organizations tend to achieve architectural magnificence and comfort at a point when symptoms of decline or collapse begin to appear." (18)

Problems to be Faced

Among the problems Ransom sees facing CIA are a lack of highly qualified personnel, (19) and a policy of promoting specialists who have little, or no, administrative ability. (20) Among those facing the intelligence community as a whole, he claims, are the growing emphasis on filling warehouses with "encycopedic data, "(21) and the tendency to rush around from "crash project" to "crash project" without a long-range, over-all goal. (22)

Praise for Dulles

Although apparently an admirer of CIA Director Allen Dulles--whom he describes as the more or less ideal "combination of administrative expert, imaginative scholar, courageous master spy, and a person of keen sensitivity"(23) --Ransom warns that on a number of occasions (such as the Hungarian uprising of 1956) CIA has failed to provide advance notice, (24) and in dealing in backroom foreign politics, may be exceeding its purpose of gathering information. (25)

Suggested Improvements

On the positive side, he recommends more congressional control over CIA, (26) the admission of the United States Information Agency and the International Cooperation Administration to the Intelligence Advisory Committee, (27) and a greater emphasis on the evaluation and dissemination of information, rather than the stockpiling of it. (28) Adoption of this last suggestion, he said, would have prevented the 1941 disaster at Pearl Harbor. (29)

Possibly With OSS

As you will recall, by memorandum dated October 20, 1958, from Mr. Roach to Mr. Belmont, it was stated that a check of the Bureau files and the Bureau library disclosed no information identifiable with Ransom. It was reported, however, that a CIA agent advised he understands Ransom was formerly with OSS. No additional pertinent information has since been received.

RECOMMENDATION:

For the information of the Director.

[redacted] telephonically advised that the captioned individual is [redacted] and works at Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) as [redacted]. [redacted] stated that at 7:00 p.m., 11-15-58, [redacted] telephoned [redacted] who appeared to be very much worried over something and "mysterious" in her conversation. [redacted] became concerned after thinking about [redacted] actions and attempted to again telephone her. When unable to contact [redacted] the second time, [redacted] decided to call the FBI. [redacted] stated he understood the FBI could not locate [redacted] but was bringing the matter to our attention in case anything had happened to [redacted] and we heard about it. He gave [redacted] address as [redacted] [redacted] telephone number [redacted]. Although [redacted] appeared intoxicated, he seemed to be genuinely worried as did [redacted] who could be heard in the background assisting [redacted] in the call.

The above was furnished to Liaison Agent S. J. Papich at 10:00 p.m. who furnished it to [redacted] CIA. (ru [redacted] ADP)

At 11:25 p.m., 11-15-58 [redacted] again called [redacted] and stated [redacted] had gotten in touch with him and [redacted] and severely reprimanded them for having called the FBI. [redacted] said he felt that [redacted] acted more "mysterious" than ever and he felt she must be in some kind of trouble. He asked that FBI protect her. He was told that we had no authority to do so. It is noted that [redacted] appeared much more intoxicated during the second call than the first. Buliles

Deals frankly with the non-secret, but seldom discussed aspects of our intelligence system — its structure, functions and failures. It is the only book that reveals the facts every citizen should know about a vitally important agency we dangerously take for granted.

For the Bureau's information there are being forwarded as enclosures to this letter three pages of photostats taken from pages 5, 6, and 7 of the November, 1958 issue of the "Frontier" Magazine (Vol. 10, No. 1), published monthly in Los Angeles, California.

These photostats contain an article titled "Brainwashed to the Brink: Are the people and their representatives told the truth about the activities of our world-wide intelligence agencies?" This article was written by one CHARLES EDMUNDSON, who is identified at the bottom of page 5 of the "Frontier" as an individual who was formerly with the United States Foreign Service for eight years until he resigned in 1957 because of disagreement with Secretary Dulles' policies in the Middle East and the Far East. The indices of the Los Angeles Office contain no information that can be identified with CHARLES EDMUNDSON. Information contained in instant article is derogatory with regard to both CIA and the United States Department of State.

The original November, 1958 issue of the "Frontier" Magazine was furnished by [redacted] to SA GILBERT G. BENJAMIN on 11/17/58, and will be maintained as an exhibit in Los Angeles file 100-47307B.

Are the people and their representatives told the truth about the activities of our world-wide intelligence agencies?

HOW is it that an adult and intelligent nation like the United States can push itself and the world to the brink of war over the small island of Quemoy on the south coast of China? The episode was evidently irrational, or the State Department would not have retreated so fast under pressure of world opinion, including that of our principal allies. But how were we chivvied into such an indefensible position in the first place?

The immediate answer lies, of course, in the relentless activity of the Nationalist China lobby, lavishly financed out of U.S. economic aid funds. Operating behind a facade of Formosa-firsters such as Sen. William F. Knowland, Sen. William E. Jenner, the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy and Assistant Secretary of State Walter Robertson, the China lobby brainwashed the American people.

But the Nationalist Chinese did not do the job alone. Behind the China lobby has stood the supposedly super-secret and lushly financed Central Intelligence Agency, presided over by Allen Welsh Dulles, younger brother of the Secretary of State. Cooperating closely with the Old Guard in the State Department, the CIA has provided the China lobby with the raw material for misguiding the American people and browbeating the American press.

The manipulations of the CIA have been almost sacrosanct and they have been used to inflame public sentiment to a point where a rational approach to China policy was, until recently at least, politically impossible. Meanwhile, as we shall see, acts of agents provocateurs within Communist China have provoked resentment aggravating the difficulty of dealing with Mao Tse-tung. The result has been to replace diplomacy with adventurism.

The best example of this is the matter of American citizens imprisoned in China. The State Department has insisted that all Americans held prisoner in China are illegally held. They have all been represented as private citizens whose arrest is a violation of international convention and an affront to the dignity of the United States. This, of course, is not true. Some may have been held without cause, but certainly most have been espionage operatives whom China has as much right to imprison as the United States has to jail the Soviet master spy, Rudolph Ivanovich Abel.

Deceiving the American People

All well informed persons in Washington know this. The facts can be gathered from a careful reading and comparison of scattered items in, say, The New York Times. After being released, several prisoners publicly confessed that they were spies, and some still held have confessed to Americans in China. The Chinese of course know this. The United States Government knows it. Many American newspapermen know it. The only ones deceived are the American people. They believe what Secretary of State Dulles tells them, and their resentment has led them to accept whatever war-fraught Far Eastern policy Secretary Dulles and Assistant Secretary Robertson have seen fit to proclaim.

Two of the four Americans now held prisoner in China are Richard Fecteau and John T. Downey, captured when their plane was shot down over Manchuria in November, 1952. There are strong indications these men were members of the CIA for the following reasons:

1. The State Department had said that Downey and Fecteau's plane accidentally wandered over Manchuria while on a routine flight from Seoul to Tokyo. This was to impute a fantastic navigational error to a U. S. Air Force crew. The off-course flight was in an almost opposite direction to their destination, Tokyo.

2. Last summer a group of young Americans went on to China from a visit to Moscow, despite State Department opposition. Some of them interviewed Fecteau and reported in the American press his statement that he and Downey were CIA agents. This story was published in the Washington Post, among other newspapers, on Sept. 9, 1957.

3. The confession was hardly necessary in view of what already had been printed in the American press, including the announcement that their Air Force plane had wandered off course.

4. The more knowledgeable Washington correspondents did not believe that the U. S. Air Force crew had made such an incredible navigational error.

On Dec. 3, 1956, John M. Hightower of the Associated Press tried to pin down the facts at a press conference with President Eisenhower. At that time China held 13 Americans of whom, according to the President, 11 were captured in uniform.

Mr. Hightower: "Mr. President, is there anything you can say, sir, about the status of the other two men, in addition to the eleven who were in uniform?"

The President: "Well, it is cloudy, I think, and I couldn't discuss it in detail."

The State Department's exclusion of American correspondents from China, largely on the ground of the imprisonment of Americans there, was a hot issue in Washington at the time. The President's virtual concession that at least two of the prisoners were not illegally held was considered a moral victory for the press committee working to lift the ban on U.S. correspondents to China. There was no question that the President was talking about Fecteau and Downey, for the CIA has admitted that these are the two who were not in uniform.

The Fecteau and Downey episode was only one of a long series of operations which Allen Dulles supported in the illusion that cloak-and-dagger tricks could restore Chiang Kai-shek to the mainland. In the Dulles brothers' facile view, Chiang had lost China only because of the indecision of mush-minded liberals in the State Department under President Truman. Bold, purposeful action would set things right.

To this end the CIA and the Air Force jointly set up something called the Air Resupply and Communications Wing. Its "mission in a global war," The New York Times explained, "would be to fly into enemy territory and drop supplies to United States or Allied agents operating there." A number of ARCW operatives were captured in China, some on the ground and others when their planes were shot down or accidentally crashed.

"Things They Shouldn't Know"

Early in 1953 the plane of Col. John Knox Arnold, commanding officer of the 581st Air Resupply and Communications Wing, was shot down on the mainland. After two and a half years the Communist Chinese released Colonel Arnold and Americans who had survived the crash with him. At a press conference arranged in Tokyo, Colonel Arnold said that under pressure he had told the Chinese "things they shouldn't know." About this time, Congress forced abolishment of the Air Resupply and Communications Wing.

The Campaign in Burma

Almost from the end of the Chinese civil war, the CIA used Formosa as a base to support a large force of Nationalist Chinese left on the Burma-China border. This operation, known as "Western Enterprises," had a pretentious base on the outskirts of Taipei, so "secret" that every alert American and Chinese in the city knew about it. Military supplies were flown from Formosa to the Nationalist Chinese in Burma. So were military experts and advisers.

The Nationalist Chinese, despite American arms and supplies, preferred to stay just over the line in Burma rather than fight the Communist Chinese. After a year or two, the Communist Chinese executed a feint, drew the Nationalists deep within Chinese territory and routed them with drastic losses. Thereafter the Nationalists did most of their raiding against Burmese villages.

Prime Minister U Nu was sympathetic with Communist Chinese complaints that he was harboring hostile forces, but his own army was unable to cope with the Nationalists. He complained repeatedly to U.S. Ambassador David M. Key. Key protested in good faith that the Nationalists were not receiving American aid. After more representations from U Nu, who was in deadly fear of reprisals by the Chinese Communists, Ambassador Key was not so sure. Published photographs of white men killed in action with the Chinese Nationalists helped change his opinion. He has been quoted as saying, "I had heard persistent reports that the Americans were taking part (in the Nationalist Chinese action) when I was sent to Burma. I found that hard to credit, but learned differently later."

With a blunt note, U Nu cut off Point Four aid in Burma and stepped up his complaints to the UN, where he had the support of all the Bandung countries. With the fine irony that history sometimes shows, Gen. Walter Bedell Smith was switched in 1953 from Director of the CIA to Under Secretary of State. The man who had been responsible for organizing "Western Enterprises" had the urgent duty of persuading Chiang Kai-shek and the CIA to call a halt. In 1954 a four-power conference — the United States, Burma, Thailand and Nationalist China — was held in Bangkok. Soon afterwards, as the United Nations reported, 6986 Nationalist soldiers and their dependents were evacuated to Formosa.

American diplomatic prestige in Asia had been dealt a heavy blow. Scars were left which helped shape mainland China's role in the Korean War. In the entire State Department and Foreign Service it would be hard to find one mature officer who would approve of the way in which international relations in this instance were taken out of the hands of diplomats and placed in the hands of cloak-and-dagger novices.

The CIA made one of its worst errors in the fall of 1950. It then advised President Truman that United Nations forces in Korea could push across the 38th parallel of latitude without the Chinese coming to North Korea's aid. Through Indian representatives in the United Nations, Mao Tse-tung's Government warned that if the UN armies crossed the 38th parallel, China would enter the war. On the basis of reports brought to him while he was traveling in Southeast Asia, Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas personally gave President Truman the same warning. When in spite of this General MacArthur was allowed to push up to China's Yalu River boundary, the Chinese threw in 600,000 "volunteers." The upshot was a stalemate and truce humiliating to the U.S.

Official misrepresentation of our relations with China has intimidated the American press from informing the public of the true facts. The American Society of Newspaper Editors held its convention in Washington last April. I asked Herbert Brucker, editor of the Hartford Courant and chairman of the Freedom of Information Committee, if the sessions would deal with misinformation regarding American prisoners in China. He replied that he knew the facts but that the public mind was so set on China issues that newspapers could not afford to go into the matter.

One Method of Censorship

The China situation has throttled the press in another way. For nearly five years Secretary Dulles forbade American newspaper correspondents to go to China. A year ago he agreed to let a few American correspondents go. But by refusing to accept Chinese correspondents in return, he assured that this concession would bear no fruit. There is little ground for doubt that Mr. Dulles has opposed permission for U.S. correspondents in China partly because he did not want to risk exposure of CIA operations there. By keeping China news inadequately covered, he could better preserve tensions necessary for maneuvers at brinkmanship.

It is not to be supposed, of course, that the CIA has centered its activities exclusively on China. Special attention is given to China in this article because it is in the spotlight and because the West Coast has a special interest in Chinese affairs. There is space only to list a few major CIA episodes in other areas:

Item: President Sukarno of Indonesia charged that the United States aided the revolt against his regime last spring. This charge was supported by a story from Tillman Durdin in The New York Times and one by Jack Anderson, assistant to Drew Pearson, in The Washington Post.

Item: CIA agents have fought a duel of espionage and instigation with Russian agents in the Middle East for several years. The CIA lost a strategic round in Iraq in July — not to the Russians, but to the Arab Nationalists — when Prime Minister Nuri Said and King Faisal were overthrown and killed. The CIA wrongly advised that Iraqi troops could safely be sent to help protect the throne of King Hussein of Jordan.

Item: In June, 1954, the CIA helped arm and direct a rebel invasion from Honduras which overthrew the Communist-leaning but duly elected Government of Guatemala. Because this ~~one~~ could be related directly to the Monroe Doctrine, it was more widely publicized than other CIA maneuvers and had wider public support.

Item: CIA masterminded and directed the coup which overthrew Prime Minister Mossadeq of Iran in 1953 and enabled the Anglo-Iranian Oil Co., for which the Dulles brothers' former law firm was counsel, to collect approximately a billion dollars in indemnity for nationalization (For details see the Saturday Evening Post, Nov. 6, 1954, and Benjamin Shwadran, "The Middle East, Oil and the Great Powers").

Item: In the fall of 1953 the blood pressure of Congress shot up several points on reading a series of stories in The New York Times telling of the arrest of CIA agents in East Germany. The Times reported that several score of agents provocateurs were arrested, including Gustav Gehlen, who had been a Major General in the Nazi Army. The prisoners were seized with faked food stamps and counterfeit bank orders to disrupt East German food rationing and bank credit. Congress was specially disturbed by the capture of a list of names of West German anti-Nazis purportedly marked for slaying. Apparently the ex-Nazis meant to use their spy roles as cover for settling old scores.

When Half a Loaf Is No Good

The United States of course needs a good intelligence agency — one considerably better than it now has — but it needs to be brought under more responsible control. Over the past three years efforts have been made in Congress to obtain a CIA supervisory committee similar to the Congressional Joint Committee on Atomic Energy. Four bills to this end were introduced but died in the last Congress. They will be re-introduced when Congress meets again, and they will again be opposed by Allen and Foster Dulles and by the considerable clique in Congress which thinks it is better to keep the public only half informed on international affairs.

An old axiom proclaims that a democracy cannot propagandize or deceive its people. But the State Department, utilizing the raw material supplied by the CIA, has done this systematically for the past six years. It will continue to do so unless the people demand that Congress end the farce.

Liaison previously has reported that CIA for some time has been endeavoring to come up with a special retirement program designed for CIA employees. At the present time, CIA personnel retire under the normal U. S. Government's retirement program.

On November 7, 1958, the Liaison Agent learned that CIA is now prepared to submit a plan which very likely will lead to the promotion of some proposed legislation during the forthcoming session of Congress. Under this plan, CIA personnel would be eligible for retirement at age 50 providing they had 20 years of service with the organization. Ten of these years must be spent overseas and 5 of those 10 years must be spent with CIA. Under this plan 5 years of foreign service with another agency would be acceptable.

Under the proposed plan, the benefits would apply to clerical as well as "intelligence officer" personnel. The plan is not quite finished status because of a controversy which arose over retirement benefits to personnel assigned at headquarters. Under the proposed program, as it stands today, officials at headquarters would not be given any more credit for retirement than under the present Government regulations. It will be necessary, unless the plan is changed, to serve 10 of the 20 years overseas. Certain CIA officials have been strongly opposed to this situation because they maintain that the men transferred to headquarters ostensibly for promotion are being penalized. The same people argue that under such a program CIA headquarters would have difficulty in encouraging personnel to accept headquarters assignments.

MEMORANDUM FOR MR. TOLSON

MR. NEASE

On December 22, 1958, Congressman Clarence Cannon, Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives, called to see me. The Congressman stated that he wanted to talk to me confidentially about a matter which had been giving him quite some concern, namely the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA). mo d.c.

The Congressman stated that the procedures followed by that agency in seeking appropriations was so ultra confidential with some aspects that he could not quite clearly comprehend. He stated that when representatives of CIA appeared before a very special and select subcommittee of his committee, all employees of the subcommittee are excluded and the room is checked carefully for any devices that might record the comments made. He stated that the CIA officials would not appear before his full committee but insisted upon a very small, select committee of five members of which he, Cannon, was Chairman.

He said that there had gradually grown up not only in the Appropriations Committee but on the floor of the House of Representatives itself, considerable unrest about the CIA and there was a growing demand for more information concerning it and the removal of Mr. Allen Dulles as head of the CIA. Congressman Cannon stated he had not as yet reached this conclusion for the reason that he knew very little about CIA notwithstanding the fact that he is on the Committee before which that agency appears for appropriations from the House.

Chairman Cannon asked me point-blank what I thought of CIA and whether it was efficient. I told the Chairman I could not answer this question because I knew very little about the inner workings of CIA and, furthermore, there had been legislation enacted which restricted the operations of CIA to areas abroad, leaving to the FBI the investigative operations within the United States in intelligence matters.

I then told the Chairman I thought it might be interesting for him to know the background out of which CIA grew. I outlined to the Chairman the orders of President Roosevelt directing this Bureau to assume responsibility for intelligence matters in the Western Hemisphere other than military and naval intelligence during the second World War. I pointed out this was done at the instance of the State Department and had not been solicited by the FBI.

I then outlined to Chairman Cannon the setup of the Office of Strategic Services (OSS), which was the predecessor of CIA and the difficulties which this Bureau had had with OSS, particularly with the efforts made by General William Donovan to enter the intelligence field in the Western Hemisphere and my opposition to it and some of the problems which arose within the United States brought about by the "growing pains" of OSS

I told Chairman Cannon I had opposed the latter and been sustained by President Roosevelt. I told Chairman Cannon

I told the Chairman the FBI had a few Agents assigned abroad and I named to him the places where they are assigned as liaison representatives and not as operational agents. I stated their function was merely to maintain contact with the federal or local law enforcement agencies in those countries for information which would be of assistance to this Bureau, primarily in the criminal field and secondarily to carry out any responsibilities this Bureau has in the internal security field. This is to advise that on January 9, 1959, Allen Dulles, Director, CIA, introduced Agent Papich to [redacted], who succeeded [redacted]

[redacted] was cordial and friendly and indicated that he would like to talk to the Liaison Agent at some time in the near future. He apparently is interested in getting a firsthand picture of relations between the FBI and CIA.

As previously reported by Liaison and approved by the Director, we will be circumspect in our dealings with [redacted]

Although this is strictly conjecture at this point, we may wish to bear in mind that [redacted] in the next two or three years could seriously be considered for the job of Director, CIA. This, of course, hinges on a good possibility that Allen Dulles will be removed in 1961. It should be noted that another good candidate would be [redacted] presently Dulles' number one man. [redacted] is a military representative and it is possible that Dulles has been grooming [redacted] in order to retain the civilian character in the job of Director, CIA.

We do not have any reason to address mail to [redacted] therefore, there is no reason to make any changes in the current procedures for addressing mail to CIA.

ACTION:

b3

The Liaison Agent will be circumspect in his dealings with [redacted] and will report the results of the forthcoming meeting with him.
